

Adam Goldstein

Chief Financial Officer

Adam Goldstein is Chief Financial Officer of QII, where he leads financial strategy and builds the financial platform behind the company's infrastructure work. He brings nearly two decades of institutional investing experience, with a focus on capital allocation and portfolio strategy at scale.

He most recently served as Managing Director at Harvard Management Company, where he helped oversee an institutional portfolio with more than $50 billion in assets under management. His work centered on long-horizon capital allocation across public and private markets, with disciplined attention to risk and return.

Before Harvard, Adam spent more than eight years at Columbia Investment Management Company, where he rose to Managing Director. His responsibilities spanned sourcing, underwriting, and portfolio strategy. He began his career as an analyst at Cogent Partners, advising institutional investors on private market portfolios.

At QII, Adam brings investment discipline to the financial structures behind large-scale infrastructure development. His work helps connect long-horizon capital with the realities of complex project delivery, giving partners and capital providers clarity from the earliest stages of development through execution.
